

ABSTRACT:

A communication protocol is presented for improved process efficiency.

The protocol maintains a queue for compression of information of a selected quantity of files and selects a file for compression and transmission according to

- 5 its priority and relative size. The invention protocol also prevents a user from selecting an encoding string length other than the optimum in the case the system is wireless, while allowing a variable string length in a wired device.